

- If you have ever told a racist joke, step inside.
- If you have ever laughed at a racist joke, step inside.
- If you have ever called a person of another race a derogatory name, either to their face or behind their back, step inside.
- If you have ever felt superior because of your race, step inside.

At the conclusion of this activity, ask participants to sit quietly while you read aloud 1 Corinthians 12-31. Divide into small groups and ask groups to discuss:

- How did you feel when you were inside the circle?
  - When did you feel most comfortable stepping inside the circle?
  - When did you feel least comfortable?
- How did you feel when you were outside the circle?
  - When did you feel most comfortable remaining outside the circle?
  - When did you feel least comfortable?
- How does this activity reflect prejudice in our world?
- Reflect on Paul's letter to the Corinthians. How does Paul challenge Christians living in today's society?
