Life is full of risks! If you are like most people, risks make you feel uncomfortable, scared, and challenged. Risk-taking is like climbing a fence because, just like you need the support of all the links on the fence to get to the top, you build your confidence by taking risks and either being successful or slipping, falling, and starting over.

In each of the boxes along the bottom, fill in some risks you have taken that were successful. In the middle boxes, fill in some risks you took that failed but you learned something from. In the top boxes, fill in some risks you are facing now. What have you learned?
