

SOME CHOICE

1. You are flunkin a course. It's the day before the exam, and somehow your roommate has gotten hold of a copy of the final. If you look at it, you will surely pass the course. Your roommate doesn't have the answers---only the questions.
2. You are shopping, and you find a wallet with one hundred dollars in it. The name on the I.D. is one of a wealthy man in your neighborhood. His daughter is a classmate of yours.
3. You are the committee chairman and must choose others to work with you. Each member will receive $25.00 for serving on the committee. Your best friend is the least qualified, but naturally she/he expects you to choose her/him. She/he is from a poor family, and could use the money.
4. You are host to a foreign student. She/he is a nice person, but her difficulty with the language is getting you down after only two days. You have got a chance for a date you have just been dying to have. If you go out, your guest will be left alone at home for the evening.
5. You are expected to arrange an anniversary party to mark the 25th year of your parent's wedding. It is supposed to be a surprise. June 4th is both the anniversary day and the most convenient date for the family. But June 4th also happens to be the day of the big rock concert---an event you have waited months to attend.
6. You and your brother share a bedroom. One day you find some Speed in the desk drawer. You are worried about the consequences of your brother's being on drugs, but don't want to tell your parents for fear he'll get into trouble.
7. You are a witness to a hit and run accident. Later you see in the newspaper that the police are looking for witnesses to the accident. In order to come forward and tell them what you saw, you'd have to admit that you were "off limits" at the time, according to your parents' standards. There is no way you could be a witness without your parents finding out you were in the forbiddin area.
8. Your teacher leaves you in charge to proctor a make-up exam for some classmates. As soon as the teacher leaves the room, the kids begin discussing the answers. You tell them to stop, but they don't pay any attention to you. The teacher's due back in just a few minutes.

SOME CHOICE 2

9. You are the ticket taker at the school dance. The rule is that only students from your school are admitted. You see a classmate coming with an outsider. The faculty advisor with you is new to the school and she/he really doesn't know the students yet.
10. You work in a department store and your boss gives you a discount on things you buy for yourself. When a friend asks you to buy a transistor radio for him, you realize that you can buy the radio at a discount, and pocket the difference in price. You could really use the extra money.
11. Your gang is caught smoking in the gym, but some get away before they are recognized. You get caught and are sent to the principal's office. Actually you weren't smoking, and if you identify the kids who got away you'd probably not be suspended.
12. You want to try out for the lead role in your school play. Your older sister is the student director. You know that if you try out you'll be putting her in the position of having to choose between you and another student. Her position of authority is an advantage for you because this might be your only chance to get the lead role.
