

Warmin' Up

Who Am I?

Write the names of well-known males on the index cards—one name on each card. You can use athletes, musicians, actors,

You'll need—

- Index cards or small pieces of paper
- Masking tape
- Marker

politicians, authors, local celebrities. The names should all be familiar to your guys. If you have a group of five or less, have one teen come to the front. Then tape one name card on the wall behind him so that the others can see it but he can't. Explain the activity like this—

The card I just hung up has the name of a famous male on it. [Name of teen] has to figure out whose name is on the card. He may only ask yes-or-no questions. He can direct his questions to the entire group or to any individual in the group. His goal is to name the person in as few questions as possible.

🕒 TIP

If the student up front is having a hard time even after asking a number of questions, give a leading hint like, "This person is a musician" or "This person died about 10 years ago." Give a helpful hint but don't make it too specific.
