

Scientists Who Push Evolution Make Me Wonder . . .

Who flung the stars up high in the sky?
What keeps all those stars there on high?
Who made the sky for the stars?

Who made the moon to shine on young lovers?
Who warmed us with sunshine by nuclear power
Before scientists knew what it was?

Who makes flower petals?
Who counts the sand pebbles?
Who starts each blade of grass?

Who keeps our hearts beating?
Who keeps our wounds healing?
Who makes the fish for our food?

Who made our minds to outthink computers
Any day of the week!
Who makes that great camera, the eye?

Who made the ear, and voices to thrill it?
Who ends each storm with a rainbow?
Who makes sunsets and sunrises?

Who died for our sins?
Who loves us that much!
What makes those scientists so blind?

— Dan Lyons