

■ THE SEX TALK

Heather's mom had decided to give her "the talk." She felt that sixteen-year-old Heather was ready to hear the "facts of life." The problem was, Heather already knew everything her mother was going to tell her.

When Heather's mom finished the lecture, she gave Heather a book to read on sex and asked if she had any questions. Heather had none. She didn't know whether she should pretend she was ignorant of the facts and ask a few questions or try and communicate her feelings about sex, or just how she should respond.
