

My Child:

Hello there again my wonderful child it is so great to write to you again. I realize as I write this letter that you are struggling with an addiction to alcohol. Alcohol can be very damaging to your body as well as to your spiritual being my child. I know that my blood is the wine which everyone drinks at my home every Sunday but as you can tell its very small amounts. My child I am not here to demand or ask that you stop drinking. The beauty of life is the privilege of being able to make your own decisions whether they be the best or the worst.

I am writing because I am seriously concerned with your well being.

You may depend on alcohol to help you sleep or to make you feel numb for a while, but afterwards you will only feel worse every time my love.

I love you my child and I do not want to see you get hurt or hurt someone else because of intoxication. I am hoping you will think this over thoroughly about getting some help from one of my other children who are carrying out my message of love and helping all those in need.

My beloved I am wishing to help you but I cannot force you to allow me to enter your heart. I hope that you do so that I can give you guidance and virtue to help end your addiction.

The alcohol will only shorten your life and your experiences.

Life is beautiful my child but it is better to live it healthy so you can experience many more wondrous things that the earth which I created has to offer you and many others.

Remember that I am always here for you and just some prayers away from entering your heart. Please visit my home on Sundays you are always welcome any time of the week as well. Remember that regardless of what you decide you are still my child and for that I will always love you dearly.

Please do not feel abandoned by me as I am always around you everywhere.

Love Always, Your Father, God
