

FATHER FIGURES

We have several teenagers who come from single-parent homes—most with the mom as that parent.

So my husband teaches the boys how to change the oil in cars, change tires, drive a stick shift, do basic carpentry work, learn how to weld, and so on. Since many of these kids come from low-income homes, they can put these skills to work in their own homes to save money. They can also perform these same tasks for the elderly and other single-parents in the community for a donation that helps the boys attend camps and activities and so on.
