

kids not to let anyone see their kissy-print or the number on their paper. Make a list of which person's lip prints appear on which numbered paper.

Then tape the kissy-prints to the wall. Let kids judge the prints for kissability. Or they can guess which lip prints belong to who. Add your own judging categories—the possibilities are endless. And so are the giggles.

A KISSY-PRINT CONTEST

This Valentine's Day activity sends everyone into giggles.

Before the contest, number white sheets of $8\frac{1}{2} \times 11$ paper, one for each person in your group. Have kids each put on lipstick—yes, even the guys. Then have each person secretly smack his or her “kissy-print” on a numbered sheet of paper. Tell