

BOBBING FOR OGRES

---

Here's a great intro to a talk about how appearances can be deceiving. First, have a caramel-apple-eating contest—except one of the apples should be an onion instead of an apple. (Make sure you choose the target here wisely. Also, make sure you have a real caramel-covered-apple ready for the onion-eater.) Or, instead of a talk about appearances, you could show the scene from Shrek where the ogre talks about the layers of an onion, and discuss how we have layers, too.