

Duckie Wuckie

Everyone sits in a circle on the floor with one person standing in the middle. The person in the middle is blindfolded and given a rolled-up newspaper. They spin this person around while everyone else changes places. The blindfolded person finds a lap by using the end of the newspaper. This person then sits in the lap and says, "Duckie Wuckie." In a disguised voice the person being sat upon responds with "quack quack." The blindfolded person tries to guess the identity of the voice (who the person is). If he/she is wrong, they are led to the center of the group and spun around again for another try. If they are right in their guess, they get to exchange places with the person they guessed.
