

FOREIGN FOOD

We used this dinner-with-a-twist as a fun fund-raiser event.

The youth group hosted a three-course meal that had 15 items on the menu—diners can pick five items as their meal. The first twist was that the entire menu is written in a foreign language—one that would be hard for people to happen to know—so people have no idea what they're ordering. The second twist is that utensils are included as items on the menu. My youngest son was thrilled when his first course happened to be fruit, a brownie, and a fork. If someone needs to purchase a utensil because they didn't happen to order one, you can charge an extra dollar for it.
