of the groups to come forward. Without telling players about the underlying bias in this game, give one group all the easy questions and give the other all the hard questions. Divide the audience into two cheering sections and alternate asking questions of the two teams. Award one point per correct answer. Periodically note the score for the two teams and use body language to express favoritism for the team with the easy question.

THE GAME Divide players into groups of four or five, and invite two SAMPLE EASY QUESTIONS > Who is the current president of the U.S.?

> What is Martin Luther King, Jr. known for?

> Five plus five equals what? > When is Halloween? school principal?

> What's the name of your > What are the three primary colors?

> What is the square root of pi? > Who are the founders of Bridge located?

SAMPLE HARD QUESTIONS

your state? > How do you say Mother's Day in Japanese? > What is the current national debt of the United States? > How do you count to 10 in French and Chinese? > Where is the Golden Gate

GOING DEEPER > For the team that got the hard questions, ask:

Did you feel you were treated unfairly? Explain. > For the team that got the easy questions, ask: How did you feel about the questions you were asked?

> For both teams, ask: In what kinds of situations have you seen people treated unfairly? > What groups of people throughout history have been treated unfairly?

> Who has responded to unfairness in ways that you admire? Why? What have they done? > What can you do when you see someone treated unfairly?