

THE TIE THAT BINDS

This dinner idea is built on the theme of unity. If you dine at circular tables tie everyone's left arms together around the table so that they must cooperate to eat. If your tables are rectangular, tie together only the left arms of people along one side. Don't connect them with the arms of the people on the other side of the table. Serve a simple menu such as hoagies and chips. Create a skit or make a brief presentation about the subject of community, cooperation, and mutual dependence. But don't be surprised if no one applauds. |
