

GUESS WHAT

Here's a good game to play at the beginning of an event while people are still arriving. You will need to do a little advance preparation by putting the following items in various places around the room: a jar full of small balls or beans, a ribbon hanging from the ceiling, a display of photos of famous (or not so famous) people, a package that you have weighed in advance, a box with something in it, and an assortment of bottles with a different substance in each bottle which gives off an odor. Then give each person a copy of "Count! Measure! Lift! Sniff!" When everyone has had enough time to try to figure out the answers, have them exchange papers while you announce the solutions. You might want to award a prize to whoever gets the most correct, or separate prizes to the winner in each of the various categories.
