

secret service

Here's a creative way to get teenagers involved in helping their community.

Have teenagers show up at the church one Saturday a month in old clothes, ready to serve. They have no idea where in the community they'll be going, or what they'll be doing; that's the secret part. This keeps them from having preconceived notions of serving. After a few rounds of outreach, bring them back to church for a free lunch and a session of debriefing. You could even give them T-shirts with "Secret Service" on them to create buzz.