

Teachers, sharers of faith

Who will be at the center of your teaching?

God can work miracles in and through you and the time you have with your students. Teachers have so little time with students compared to their regular school teachers, their parents and their peers and the media and on-line world. It is truly miraculous if you are able to make a difference in their lives and open their hearts to a god that their parents, peers and certainly culture may know nothing of. Know that God's power is not limited and he can do great things in very little time. Teach the students not the material. Make sure they know you love them. They will never believe that the God you are teaching them about loves them if they do not believe that you do. Little gestures have a great impact. Pray to be open to the "God moments", where God is working in a situation to teach and heal.

Be strong, you are not their friend, you are a spiritual guide. Laugh with them, pray from your heart with them. Let them see you are also in motion, they are a work-in-progress as well. Ask their help in praying for you and guiding you in the growing edge of your life. For example if you are working on trying to judge less, ask them to point out to you when you jump to conclusions.

Your job is to get people to God, and then let him take over.

Above all we must reach out to the fatherless boys
