

SITUATION SHEET

1. Your teacher compliments you for your work on the senior party. You know that you didn't do anything at all on the project but that it was Sally Flemming who was mainly responsible for the party's success. What would you do?

- a. Say, "Oh, it was nothing!"
- b. Tell her that Sally Flemming did almost all the work and that the success of the party belonged to her.
- c. Thank your teacher for noticing your contribution.
- d. Tell her that you are always glad to help and that she can all on you anytime.
- e. Tell her that you did not really carry your weight on the committee.

2. Your friend has a motorcycle and you want to learn how to ride it. As a favor to you, he takes you out and teaches you. You think that you know what you are doing and ignore his warnings of caution. You go too fast, lose control, hit a post, and demolish his motorcycle. He has no insurance on his cycle. You end up in the hospital with a badly broken leg. What would you do about the motorcycle?

- a. Figure, "Tough luck. He should have carried insurance!"
- b. Blame your friend for not being a better teacher.
- c. Chalk it off as one of those things and pray for the repair of the bike.
- d. Take it as an obligation of honor to pay for the repair of the bike.
- e. Wait for him to ask you to pay for the damage. If he doesn't, you can feel "home free."

3. You are taking an exam and notice that a friend of your has his textbook open and is copying an answer. What would you do?

- a. Report him to the teacher who is monitoring the exam.
- b. Talk to him privately and threaten to tell on him if he does not confess to the teacher.
- c. Talk to him privately and ask him to straighten out the matter with the teacher.
- d. Tell all your friends what you saw.
- e. Forget about it on the grounds that it is none of your business.

4. You notice that one of your close friends is frequently absent from class and has not been normal in relationships lately. You happen to walk into the restroom at school and see your friend smoking marijuana with some other students. What should you do?

- a. Pretend you didn't see what was going on.
- b. Forget about it since it is none of your business what another person does.
- c. Confront your friend with warnings about the dangers of smoking pot.
- d. Tell your friend's parents about what is going on.
- e. Ask some other Christian friends to pray for your friend.

5. You have a Christian friend who lives in an apartment. She tells you that she is very low on money and that things are tough. However, one good thing has happened. When she moved in, some of her neighbors hooked her onto cable TV. Since the cable company does not know about it, it is free. She is very grateful for being on cable because she is so blessed by the Christian programming she is able to watch. She is not a strong Christian and is very sensitive. What would your response be?

- a. Thank God with her that she has free TV.
- b. Tell her what that she is doing is theft and that no Christian should steal, even if the result is beneficial.
- c. Call the cable company and report her.
- d. Give her the money to install cable properly and continue to pay her monthly bills.
- e. Tell her that honesty is more important than anything she will receive from watching the religious programs.

6. One of your friends has recently broken up with her boyfriend. She is despondent and seems to be taking it very hard. Her mother calls you and asks you to take a special interest in her daughter. She does not want you to let her daughter know that she called. What would you do?

- a. Pretend that your interest was prompted only by your desire to be a friend.
- b. Tell your friend her mother called and asked you to help.
- c. Tell your friend the truth if she asks, but not volunteer any information about the circumstances of your interest.
- d. Ask the mother to tell her daughter she has talked with you.
- e. Tell the mother that you are not interested.
